

A close-up photograph of a person's hand reaching out and touching a patch of vibrant green grass. The hand is positioned in the upper right quadrant of the frame, with fingers slightly spread. The grass is in sharp focus, showing individual blades. The background is blurred, suggesting an outdoor setting. The text 'Dirty Nasty' is written in a large, stylized, red-to-black gradient font, and 'girl♥zine' is written in a smaller, black, cursive font below it.

"i read too!"

Next day, [redacted] calls me and says, She's pregnant. No. Listen. I'm leaving you. I hate you. Okay. Listen. Our slutty sister-in-law left our brother on [redacted] 6th. They were gone for a month. Split. She came back. When did she come back? She came back after we got back from [redacted] 1st. Okay, hurry up. Chat's running out. Which was... When was... It's confirmed she came back on the 8th of May. Our sister-in-law is [redacted] weeks and 3 days pregnant. When would she have had to get pregnant for the due date to be [redacted] 7th of 2026?

why do i cry
every time i see the ocean?

i've been chasing the feeling since the moment i had an idea of what it would be like someday

these thoughts
will not make my heart ache

EVERY-

vultures can dissolve almost all toxic bacteria that may be growing on a carcass, and if they can't dissolve it, their immune systems have adapted to actually use the bacteria to aid in digestion (such as clostridia and fusobacteria – both insanely toxic and deadly) they have the strongest digestive acids of all animals, a pH of 0, which is as strong as battery acid the only vertebrates to scavenge for all meals. they are actually super smart for this evolutionary adaptation, as its very low risk they are some of the best parents - both mom and dad vultures take turns warming the eggs, feeding the babies after they hatch, and protecting them for months even after they learn to fly <3 they have bald heads so they can dip their noggins into the goopy bloody rotting flesh and still say clean they slow the spread of disease! about 70% of carrion and the diseases accompanying it are eliminated by vultures
